1. Prepare the tiger tail:

Thread one end of the 28cm tiger tail through the hole in the clam shell.

Make a knot leaving about a 4cm tail, thread the end of the 'tail' back through the hole and pull so the knot is tight and in the middle of the clamshell.

Optional: for added security put a small drop of glue on your knot and leave to dry before closing the clam shell.

Close the clam shell by folding it in half, matching the eyelets on the top.

With your flat nose pliers give the clam shell a couple of squeezes till it is firmly closed and covering your knot.

*Please have a look at our YouTube channel for more detailed instructions on memory wire use and pinning a looping beads.

2. Thread beads onto the tiger tail, making sure that at least the first 5 or 6 beads also have the tiger tail you have fed back through the clam shell hole going through them. This way you will avoid your anklet becoming loose or undone.

You can decide your own bead order. The examples on the right show one which has a symmetrical layout, and another that has an asymmetric layout with bead sections that create a stripe effect.

3. Once you have finished threading the beads, make sure you leave 4cm at the end of the tiger tail.

Feed on your clamshell, make a large loose knot and slowly tighten it, pushing it down as close as you can inside the clamshell so there is only a very small gap between your beads and the clam shell.

Now feed your leftover tail back through the hole and through at least 5 or 6 of the beads.

Again as an option, you can put a small drop of glue on your knot, let it dry and then close your clam shell.

4. Make a small extender by cutting two strands of 2cm chain, and joining them in the middle with a jump ring.

Finish one end with a flower charm attached with a jump ring.

5. When connecting the extender to the anklet at one end, add the shell charm onto the jump ring at the same time.

6. Finally, connect a clasp to the clam shell at the other end of the anklet to finish.

*Please note, there may be minor variations in the contents compared to the images. Our kits are made in the UK so if we run out of any beads or parts we will substitute them with something very similar and within the same colour and theme. There will always be enough to complete your creation.

When making your jewellery please be aware that there will be small parts that need to be carefully disposed of. Please be careful of this if you have small children nearby.
